

Terry Lamb

Professor of Languages & Interdisciplinary Pedagogy and Director of the Centre for Teaching Innovation at the University of Westminster, Senate Award Fellow, Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Académiques and previously Director of Learning and Teaching and of various Education and Applied Linguistics programmes at the University of Sheffield. Before his university post, he taught languages (French, German, Spanish, Turkish) in secondary schools in London and Derbyshire, and English in Poland and Turkey. He has a commitment to supporting and promoting linguistic diversity and a particular research interest in multilingual policy and pedagogy in different contexts. He has carried out research in the field of urban education, focusing on ways in which learners' plurilingualism can be supported in order to benefit the individual as well as the community as a whole. His research into education for linguistic diversity encompasses areas such as community languages, complementary education, language planning, diversification, language awareness, English as an Additional Language and plurilingual pedagogies. Presently, he is coordinating a project, as part of a cooperation between the European Commission and the ECML of the Council of Europe, which is supporting EU member states to develop inclusive practices in migration contexts. He is former President and current Secretary General of the Fédération Internationale des Professeurs de Langues Vivantes.
